Convicted motorist's warning to not drink and drive

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

A SITTINGBOURNE man has spoken out about the dangers of drink-driving over Christmas after he was convicted of the offence five years ago.

Danny Holland, 26, from Kemsley, has joined forces with Kent Police as officers crack down on the crime over the festive season in a bid to reduce the number of people killed or injured on the roads.

Musician Mr Holland had his driving licence suspended for a year after being convicted in 2007. He was arrested after just two pints of alcohol.

As part of his sentence, he attended a course aimed at educating people on the effects of drink.

Now Mr Holland has helped launch the Kent Christmas drink-drug drive campaign by speaking about his experiences and the lessons he has learnt from them.

He said: "It's become very clear that people believe two pints is a safe/legal limit to drive on. I thought the same way five years ago and was convicted.

"People are shocked when I tell them this. I think most people have an image of what a drink-driver is and think they'll be fine on two pints, it's not like they're drunk or anything."

"But you can still be a drink-driver on what most people would think is a small quantity of alcohol."

BLAST FROM THE PAST

A 1952 Olympian, who claimed the title of the 'fastest white man in the world', has relived his sporting career.

Nicholas Stacey, 85, who lives near Faversham, appeared in one of the most famous sporting moments in history, holding up his friend Sir Roger Bannister as he collapsed at the end of his world record-breaking sub four-minute mile.

Mr Stacey's rise to the top started in the Royal Navy as he took part in sprint races in an athletics competition on his base.

"The sports officer came into the mess one evening and said all officers must take part in the station sports day the next day," he said. "I was rather annoyed to be honest. I said 'put me down for the two shortest events', and I won them."

Trio's day trip to the coast leaves them in a sticky situation

DRAMATIC scenes unfolded on Sheppey last week after a nine-year-old girl became trapped in mud and had to be rescued by fire crews.

The girl, from London, was walking along the coast on a day trip with a friend and his father on Thursday when the incident took place.

It began when the girl's eight-year-old friend became stuck in the mud walking below the cliffs in Warden Bay Road. His father went to pull him free and immediately started sinking.

Luckily the pair managed to get out of the mud and raise the alarm, but by this point the little girl was also stranded in the thick mud.

Kent Fire and Rescue Service and the Coastguard were called shortly before noon and in a joint rescue operation, which took 30 minutes, successfully freed the girl.

Sheppey watch manager, Tony Fox, said: "The girl was extremely cold, wet and very shaken, but unharmed."

"This incident highlights how dangerous parts of our coastline can be."

"Don't risk your life by venturing onto the mud; it can be like quick-sand and once you get stuck, it can be very hard to get out."

"If you are out walking take extra care and take a mobile phone with you, so that if you do get into trouble you can raise the alarm."

After giving them hot drinks in the fire engine, the trio were taken back to Eastchurch fire station to warm up and shower before they returned home to London.

MARRIAGE

Aisle be damned: Some superstitious couples put off a 2013 wedding

EXCLUSIVE By Marijke Cox

WEDDING venues across the county are reporting a drop in bookings for next year as superstitious couples opt out of getting married in 2013.

In some cases, venues are seeing reductions of as much as 10 per cent as blushing brides planning the perfect day go to great lengths to avoid any mishaps – even waiting an extra year to walk down the aisle.

And all because couples appear to believe in the number 13 being 'unlucky for some'.

The holiday industry is already aware of how the number can have an impact on business, with many travellers opting not to fly on the 13th of the month.

In a new twist, it seems doting couples are anxious too.

Penshurst Place and Gardens, near Tonbridge, which was awarded the Kent Wedding Venue of the Year Award last year, said 2012 was its strongest year ever for wedding bookings.

A spokesman for its banqueting and events team said: "We have had a few couples comment they are not booking for 2013 because of the number 13, but we have found, maybe as a result, that 2014 bookings are well up on what we would expect at this point, which is really encouraging."

A spokeswoman for wedding venue Cooling Castle in Rochester said: "We're quite well booked up, but compared to previous years there has been a slight drop for 2013."

"It's each to their own; for some people that kind of thing matters."

One Canterbury venue, which wished to remain anonymous, confided bookings were down 10 per cent; due in part to superstitious couples.

Others, however, believed any drop could be for more pragmatic reasons.

An event spokesman at Knowlton Court in Canterbury explained: "There has been a drop here which may have something to do with it being 2013, but then there are just so many

Concerns plate will deter new car sales

CAR dealers have long been aware of potential problems when it comes to shifting new cars next year, when the number plates change to '13.

Earlier this year, the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA) confirmed motorists concerned would have the choice to revert to a '62-plate if they were superstitious.

However, with '62 assigned to cars purchased from September this year, and the '13 plates coming out in March, there are concerns those opting to avoid the 'unlucky' 13 could find they miss out on resale values as it will suggest the car is older than it actually is.

In Afghanistan last year, there were problems when a new plate came out bearing the number '39. It is a number associated with prostitution in the country, and prompted sales to dip and angry motorists to fork out for different numbers.

places to get married in Kent so that could be a factor too."

Sales manager at Maidstone's Best Western Russell Hotel, Liane Bayliss, added: "It's a possibility this is putting people off getting married next year. I would also put it down to people trying to save their pennies; many people just don't have the money to get married."

Event organisers at Hever Castle, near Edenbridge, admitted they had been worried earlier this year that superstitions would run high for

HEALTH

Give the ultimate gift this Yuletide by donating blood and saving a life

FEAR of the typical drop in blood donations over the festive period has prompted health chiefs to issue a plea to the public to continue to donate.

Every year supplies dwindle over Christmas as people become busy with preparations and seeing loved ones.

NHS Blood and Transplant (NHSBT) said while it was easy to forget appointments to give blood, hospital patients needed transfusions during the festive period just as much as any other time of the year.

Health bosses stressed that while many people will be out celebrating with friends and family, others will spend December receiving cancer treatment or undergoing lifesaving surgery and emergency care.

NHSBT lead donor relations manager, John Canning, said: "While we appreciate people are often very busy shopping for presents and planning get-togethers at this time of the year, donated blood is needed just as much as ever in December.

"As a result, we are appealing for people here to show warm hearts by taking just a little time out to give blood this Christmas."

"We are particularly keen for younger people and those who haven't given blood before to get in touch so that they can become the lifesavers of the future."

This winter, the NHS is also aiming to recruit 100,000 new donors in 100 days to protect future blood stocks.

Every year new donors are needed to replace existing ones who drop out of the system, but this year the need is more urgent after a dramatic decline in the number of younger donors signing up.

For those wanting to roll up their sleeves to give blood contact 0300 123 23 23 or visit www.blood.co.uk to book an appointment.

SLICE OF LUCK: Wedding venues have seen drop 2013 causing a reduction in bookings.

A spokeswoman said: "We were a bit concerned about about 2013, but figures are looking good. People aren't booking so far ahead now too, so we're expecting an influx early next year for the same year."

NEWS IN BRIEF

→ Car ploughs into duo

TWO women were this weekend fighting for their lives after a motorist fell ill at the wheel of his car, and ploughed into them as they walked along a seaside esplanade.

The incident happened on Tuesday in Sandgate, near Folkestone.

The car, driven by a man in his 50s, mounted the pavement and hit the women. He died at the scene. The two victims were taken to hospitals in London and Ashford.

→ Drug factories busted

NEARLY 900 cannabis plants with a street value of £360,000 were found in police raids.

Officers searched properties in Watling Street, Strood; Grove Road, Northfleet; and Cowper Road in Murston, near Sittingbourne, and discovered cannabis factories before dismantling them.

Police say they are conducting full investigations into all three cases. Anyone with information should contact police on 101.

FIRE

One week on from Channel Tunnel fire drama, investigation is under way into what sparked a major alert

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

EUROTUNNEL chiefs say they are waiting on the findings of a probe by French authorities into the blaze which caused major disruption to the cross-Channel route.

Terrified travellers were left in shock on November 29, after they spotted the train emerging from the French side of the tunnel, at Coquelles near Calais, with a lorry alight and plumes of black smoke.

The news quickly spread via online social networking website Twitter, prompting fears of a major incident.

But it appears safety procedures kicked in quickly and the fire was swiftly dealt with.

However, all services were suspended while the tunnel was cleared of smoke, preventing both Eurostar and Le Shuttle services.

This week, as a full investigation began, Eurotunnel were quick to point out the fire was not caused by any tunnel issue, and that the route remained safe.

The alarm was first raised at around 1pm when smoke alarms sounded at the French end of the north tunnel.

The fire was identified to be on a HGV train which transports freight vehicles. The train was stopped then diverted to an emergency siding where the French Fire and Rescue Service was called to put out the blaze.

All 36 lorry drivers were evacuated from the train through a door and then taken away by bus. There were 29 trucks on the train.

The incident caused delays to passengers after Eurostar suspended its services and there were hold-ups on the M20 at junction 11A.

John Keefe, from Eurotunnel, said they do not know why the fire started and the French Accident Investigation Bureau and emergency services will investigate to piece it together.

He said: "We won't know the cause until they make that public."

Mr Keefe added that Eurotunnel had launched an internal investigation to look at whether it could have been stopped sooner and also whether the procedures worked.

He said: "Trucks catch fire. There are all kinds of things that happen. It's not a tunnel related thing, it's a truck related issue."

Mr Keefe said the fire could have been caused by anything from an electrical fault to tyres overheating.

He said: "Given that we carry 1.2-1.3 million trucks a year, it's inevitable that at some point we will have one catch fire."

Mr Keefe assured that there are extensive procedures to deal with such incidents.

He said: "We are always as prepared as we can possibly be."

After last week's fire there was no damage left to the tunnel, but smoke had to be cleared before it could be reopened.

...AND IT'S NOT THE FIRST TIME THIS HAS HAPPENED

LAST week's fire was the fourth to take place in the Channel Tunnel since it opened in 1994. All four occurred on HGV trains carrying trucks and their drivers.

November 18, 1996: A fire rages for more than seven hours after a train carrying a burning lorry enters the English end and stops 19km into the tunnel. Truck drivers were treated in a French hospital, but there were, miraculously, no serious injuries.

However, the probe following the fire and repairs to 500 metres of damaged track, meant the tunnel remained closed for six months.

August 21, 2006: Similar to November's incident, a truck on an HGV caught fire. There were no injuries or damage and the tunnel reopened within hours.

September 11, 2008: Some 11km from the French tunnel entrance, a fire started on an HGV train. Several people received hospital treatment for minor injuries and the tunnel closed for two days.

The undamaged south tunnel reopened, offering a restricted service for five months.

The blaze was so intense tracks melted and temperatures reached 1,000 degrees Centigrade. The repair bill was £48 million.

NEWS IN BRIEF

➡ Drink drive campaign

THE annual crackdown on drink driving over the Christmas season has been launched by Kent Police.

It forms part of the force's Stay Safe This Winter campaign.

Kent County Council's Stephen Horton, who attended the launch, said: "It's not how much alcohol it takes to make you dangerous, it's how little. There is no way to know when you're over the drink drive limit. Drink driving wrecks lives."

➡ More 4x4s are stolen

OWNERS of 4x4s are once again being told to ensure their vehicles are properly secured following a spate of recent thefts.

Three were stolen last weekend - in Maidstone, Ashford and Selling near Faversham. It comes just a week after officers issued a warning in the Ashford area after more than 10 reported thefts in recent weeks.

Police say owners should, where possible, boost security and fit a tracking device.

➡ Tesco change plans

SUPERMARKET giant Tesco has agreed to change the look of a proposed new store in Westgate-on-Sea after a barrage of complaints.

Campaign group the Victorian Society, and local residents, had opposed the look of the Express store saying it did not suit its surroundings.

As a result of the pressure, the chain agreed it would submit altered plans.

MEDIA

'Privacy is used by bad people to do bad things' says ex-tabloid hack in warning of danger in stifling press

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

A FORMER News of the World reporter, embroiled in an ongoing dispute over phone hacking with actor Hugh Grant, has warned of the danger of threatening a free press.

Paul McMullan, who was secretly taped by the star two years ago admitting that bosses at the now-defunct newspaper knew about the illegal practice, said if freedom of the press was jeopardised there would be nobody to police the actions of judges, politicians and other people in high public office positions.

The ex-hack-turned-pub landlord, who runs The Castle Inn in Dover, was responding to recommendations set out in the Leveson Report, which said newspapers should continue to be self-regulated, but needed a tough new independent regulator, backed up by a new law.

While Fleet Street editors have backed the majority of the recommendations, they oppose the idea of new legislation.

Prime Minister David Cameron is also reluctant to introduce a new law.

Mr McMullan, who sensationally claimed "privacy is for paedos" in an explosive testimony in the Leveson Inquiry, warned such changes could stifle the press, although he admitted he thought the report was good overall.

He explained: "We need a free press to police the judges, police our politicians – if we see free press stopped, who else is going to do this?"

"We'll end up having a press that won't write anything bad about the Government even if they should."

Mr McMullan said phone hacking and other underhand methods used in his early days of reporting helped expose corrupt people.

"In 1992, I wrote a story about Jimmy Savile and his links with Broadmoor. He came down on me like a ton of bricks. It's the only libel case I've ever lost. We know now what he was doing."

"That's why I can say I wish Jimmy Savile had a mobile phone back then."

"Privacy is used by bad people to do bad things. The only people I have sympathy for and should have privacy are victims of bereavement."

Commenting on the Milly Dowler case, in which it was revealed in 2011 that the murdered girl's phone was hacked sparking public outcry, Mr McMullan – who stressed he did not hack her phone – said the press "were trying to do anything they could to find her".

"The problem was the police were being unhelpful," he claims. "It took them seven years to find her killer. We were doing anything we could to stop anything happening to her."

Asked whether it was, in fact, simply to get a story, he said: "I used any lead to actually try and help the girl and her family."

"We were being handed pictures of her and information and that was published with the support of the family. We were co-operating with the police."

"People were angry that a journalist may have hacked the phone as they were looking at it with emotion due to the tragedy. I still think no-one cares if you hack Brad Pitt or Robbie Williams."

But celebrities would disagree.

Hugh Grant is leading a campaign against press intrusion into private lives and recently interviewed Mr McMullan for the Channel 4 documentary Taking on the Tabloids.

The actor was a victim of phone hacking and is part of the Hacked Off campaign, which launched a petition calling for the Leveson recommendations to be implemented. So far it has more than 140,000 signatures.

Speaking to the BBC, Mr Grant said there was "astonishment and betrayal" among victims of SMALL TALK: Paul McMullan at Leveson Inquiry unscrupulous media conduct after the Prime Minister refused to fully endorse the report.

Mr McMullan said he has a "long-running, amicable feud" with the actor.

"The first time he came to my pub he had a wire, although he was fairly indiscreet about it, and he recorded me saying bosses on the News of the World knew all about phone hacking."

"He was ordered to disclose the tape to police and it played a big part in the investigation."

Mr Grant paid Mr McMullan another visit for his documentary.

"He had a clip about my perspective on celebrities and how they play the game," said Mr McMullan.

"They can't expect to complain about being photographed when they're out and about and then get paid £1 million because they were photographed. They can't have it both ways."

This newspaper contacted Hacked Off several times for a response to Mr McMullan's comments but they did not return our calls.

CRIME

'Restorative justice' plays key role as child arrest figures drop

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

A DRAMATIC drop in the number of children in the county being arrested by police has been applauded by a leading penal reform charity.

Despite the figure still remaining high – with 123 children under the age of 17 being arrested every week across Kent – numbers have dropped significantly on recent years.

In 2008, the number of arrests stood at 10,157. In 2011, the most recent figures available, it had plunged to 6,409.

The Howard League for Penal Reform, which obtained the statistics, said more often than not children who get into trouble are just "challenging teenagers" and that only a handful are involved in serious crime.

The charity praised Kent Police for the drop in arrests.

Central custody Chief Inspector Mark Chambers said reasons for the decrease involved several factors.

He explained: "There are more alternatives available to police now such as restorative practises. These involve dealing with a crime report in a way that best meets the needs of the victim.

"This might not result in an arrest, but

TOUGH: Child arrests have seen major fall could include the offender apologising directly to those affected by their behaviour or making good the damage caused, by payment or repair."

He said the law also required police to justify every arrest.

"This might include the need to search a person's home and for some young people the permission to search may be granted by their parent or guardian so an arrest may not always be necessary to facilitate this requirement.

"Moreover, the necessity to arrest might arise from the need to protect a victim of crime from a suspect and this can vary in frequency between adults and children."

He stressed that every arrest required an individual decision by the arresting officer based on the circumstances of the incident.

The Howard League hailed the 37 per cent drop in Kent as a huge success.

Chief Executive of the charity, Frances Crook, said she hoped the trend continued.

She said: "How we respond to this nuisance behaviour could make a difference for the rest of their lives. An arrest can blight a life and lead to a criminal record for just being naughty. The positive change in policing children will release resources to deal with real crimes.

"Only a handful of children are involved in more serious incidents and they usually suffer from neglect, abuse or mental health issues. A commitment to public safety means treating them as vulnerable children and making sure they get the help they need to mature into law-abiding citizens."

She said under the last government, police success was measured by the number of arrests and children proved a "seductive way" to make up the numbers.

Last year, nationwide there were more than 209,000 arrests of boys and girls aged 17 and under. This number includes 2,117 arrests of children aged 10 or 11.

'Sold' White Cliffs shine light on issue

AN ENORMOUS 'sold' sign was beamed onto the White Cliffs of Dover this week, as Oxfam looked to raise awareness of what it dubs 'land grabs' in developing countries.

It says the practice leaves poor people in Africa, Asia and Latin America homeless and without access to the land they rely on to grow food and make a living.

Dover was among a number of sites which had 'sold' signs erected by the charity.

Oxfam's Lisa Rutherford said: "With land the size of Kent being sold off every 13 days in the world's poorest countries, more and more poor people are at risk of having their land grabbed from beneath their feet.

"They often happen with no prior consultation; imagine being thrown off your land without warning, finding yourself homeless, landless, penniless and at risk of violence."

School ready to become centre of the universe by hosting Stargazing Live

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

STARGAZERS across the county are set to flock to a school's astronomy centre as it plays host to BBC TV cameras for the return to our screens of the hugely popular Stargazing Live.

The programme proved one of the surprise hits of last year, with a stellar response to the informative show - hosted by Professor Brian Cox and science-loving comedian Dara O'Briain - from both professionals and amateurs alike.

And this year Canterbury will be taking centre stage, with the south east event being held at the Langton Star Centre at Simon Langton Grammar School for Boys on the evening of January 8.

The Langton evening is just one of a country-wide network of events, bringing together astronomical societies, museums and discovery centres, country parks and local authorities.

They include planetarium shows, rocket-making, star parties, alien activities and nighttime star cruises as well as topical talks and discussions contributing to a national stargazing celebration.

Simon Langton was specially chosen because of its equipment, including its own observatory, star centre and lecture theatre.

Director of the centre, Dr Becky Parker, said they will be aiming high on the night.

"We hope to see planets, Jupiter, Uranus and deep space objects such as our nearest galaxy, Andromeda," she said. "We will also look at the Orion Nebula in Orion's sword, which is an area of new star formation.

"Exploring the skies and everything about it is important because we want to understand the amazing world in which we live and appreciate the wider universe of which we are a part."

Dr Parker, head of physics at Simon Langton, is a well-respected name in science. Earlier this year she won the first Royal Astronomical Society Patrick Moore Medal in recognition of her outstanding work as a teacher of astronomy.

Dr Parker said the evening will also include free family activities and a live link up with a NASA astronaut.

She added: "We are just hoping for clear skies."

The Langton Star Centre inspires students in the fields of science, technology, engineering and mathematics by giving them opportunities to work alongside scientists and engineers and take part in original, innovative research.

Last year, more than 113,000 people took part in Stargazing Live events around the UK.

REGISTER FOR TICKETS

To run alongside the shows, there are free Star Guides and special Star Party packs for home use to download at www.bbc.co.uk/stargazing.

There are also hundreds of other events and activities happening across the country, with a list at www.bbc.co.uk/things2do.

Entry to Simon Langton is free, but it is a ticketed event. Tickets are available by random draw until December 11 from the BBC. To register visit www.bbc.co.uk/showsandtours.

10-year-old nominated for charity 'Oscar' after his tireless fundraising

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

AN INSPIRATIONAL 10-year-old has been nominated for a prestigious award after he helped to raise thousands of pounds for a cancer charity.

Jonjo Heuerman, from Wilmington near Dartford, is one of three finalists in the National Campaigner of the Year category at the Spirit of London Awards (Sola).

Dubbed the 'community youth Oscars' the awards ceremony takes place at the O2 Arena on Monday, and is organised by the Damiola Trust – an organisation set up in the memory of the 10-year-old schoolboy who died after being stabbed on his way home in Peckham.

Since his grandmother passed away from bowel cancer in 2007, Jonjo has campaigned tirelessly to raise funds for the Bobby Moore Fund which supports research into the disease and was set up in the memory of the legendary West Ham and 1966 World Cup winning England captain.

The youngster has worked with Mr Moore's widow Stephanie to raise awareness of the disease by taking part in sponsored walks and through television appearances.

Like Jonjo's grandmother Lyn, Mr Moore died of bowel cancer in 1993.

After Lyn's death, Jonjo's sister Megan, 15, decided she wanted to try and raise money for cancer research.

Then Jonjo, not to be outdone by his sibling, joined in with the fundraising and even took part in a 27-mile walk from Wembley Stadium to West Ham United where he has a season ticket.

Next year, to mark the 20th anniversary year of the football legend's death, Jonjo will be organising a tag team to travel to all 92 professional football clubs in the UK.

He has managed to raise a total of £90,000 for the charity and his campaigning to raise awareness has proved invaluable.

His mother Donna said: "I was absolutely blown away when I found out he had been nominated. I am really proud. He's such a cheeky chap. They call him the 'Pied Piper of the East End' because wherever he walks people follow."

Last week, Jonjo and the other finalists met Prime Minister David Cameron at Downing Street as part of the build up to the awards.

His mother said: "Jonjo was so excited to meet him. The Prime Minister made a fuss of him and was playful with him."

PIED PIPER OF EAST END: Jonjo Heuerman

The Sola awards were created in 2009, as a legacy to all youths who have lost their lives to violence in London and aim to show how much inspirational young people are valued. It includes categories such as Achievement Through Sport and Young Business Entrepreneur.

This year will be a star-studded event with singer Labrinth, pop band McFly and Britain's Got Talent winners dance troupe Diversity taking to the stage to perform.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Empty homes plan

A CONSULTATION period is under way in Tunbridge Wells over proposals which could bring some of the 1,200 empty homes in the borough back into use.

The local council wants to hear the views on the proposals from those living in the borough, with the consultation period running up until January 7.

To take part in the process and find out more, see www.tunbridgewells.gov.uk/emptyhomes.

Tributes to councillor

TRIBUTES have been paid to former Gravesham councillor Frank Marven who died recently. He was 84.

The Tory served as a borough councillor for 37 years and was Mayor of Gravesham between 1982-83.

Council leader John Burden said: "Although we were political opponents, Frank often worked with us for the good of the people of the borough. He was a true gentleman."

Picking up top award

A GROUP of volunteers from East Malling who have made it their purpose to keep their village litter-free for the last five years picked up more than just rubbish this week.

They collected top prize in the environment category of the Telegraph National British Volunteers Awards, and picked up the gong and a cheque for £500 at a special ceremony in London..

Chancellor's Autumn Statement brings little festive cheer for hard-hit business

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

A LEADING voice from the county's business community has admitted the economic state of the country is "a bit scary" following Chancellor George Osborne's Autumn Statement on Wednesday.

Roger House, chairman of the Kent and Medway branch of the Federation of Small Businesses, said there were some positives to be drawn from Wednesday's address to MPs – such as a cut in corporation tax – but admitted it was dominated by concern.

He said: "The first thing I felt is just how grim it is economically – that state we are in is a bit scary, I suppose."

One change will see more people pay the 40p rate of income tax and wealthier pensioners will get less tax relief.

However, a planned 3p rise in petrol duty has been scrapped, corporation tax cut and the tax-free personal allowance raised, but child benefit increased at less than the rate of inflation.

Mr House said: "I'm impressed he's cancelled the rise in fuel duty, and the cut in corporation tax is welcome.

"He has also helped people who are not earning a lot of money.

"In the case of the higher tax bracket, I don't

MINISTER REVEALS GOVERNMENT LOOKING TO EXPAND HIGH-SPEED RAIL TO COAST

TRANSPORT minister Simon Burns braved the elements to visit Manston on Wednesday morning to confirm the Government was examining ways of extending the high-speed rail track to Ramsgate.

Boosting the rail links from London to Thanet has long been touted as a key part of the jigsaw of injecting new life into east Kent and invigorating its commercial proposition.

In addition, supporters of Manston believe a high-speed link is essential to underline its status as a viable option to ease the south east's aviation problems.

Currently, the high-speed trains can only travel at peak speeds on the track between St Pancras and

ON TRACK: Mr Burns (left) with Sir Roger Gale MP and Charles Buchanan

Ashford, before it switches to the slower tracks.

Mr Burns said: "In principle, the line is alright although improvements and upgrades to such things as signalling are needed. But this is not impossible. "There is ongoing work to further improve the journey time and the passenger experience."

"That's a matter for the local council and transport groups," he said. "It's not for me to come here and dictate that sort of thing to the local community."

The minister had been invited to visit Manston by Thanet North MP Sir Roger Gale. He also met Kent County Council leader Paul Carter and airport chief executive Charles Buchanan.

Mr Burns said: "What I can pledge is that we are making investments in the rail and road networks."

know how many people in the business community I am part of earn more than £41,000 – but I'm guessing it's not many."

Sittingbourne and Sheppey MP Gordon Henderson said: "In a week in which we have seen more job losses in my constituency, the decision to scrap the proposed 3p per litre planned for by the previous Labour government is much needed boost not only for private motorists, but also hard pressed companies."

Regal move to change heir to the throne rules welcomed by experts

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

AS THE national media ponder whether the Duchess of Cambridge could in fact be expecting twins, after confirming this week she was pregnant, the discussion has now turned to rules on succession to the throne.

The Duchess spent much of this week in hospital suffering from acute morning sickness, leading some to speculate there could be more than one royal baby on the way.

All of which would further complicate the rules which, traditionally, have seen the first male in line for the throne.

But this week it was confirmed the centuries-old protocol was set to change, with all 16 Commonwealth countries agreeing there should be equality in who becomes monarch.

Deputy Prime Minister Nick Clegg confirmed he was now finalising making the decision law.

Currently Prince Charles is in line to replace the Queen, followed by Prince William, the Duke of Cambridge. As laws stand now, if his wife gave birth to a daughter first, then a son, the boy would automatically become heir.

Heather Collingwood is a sociology lecturer at MidKent College. She said the succession changes are important, but should have been done centuries ago.

She told us: "The royal family should be commended for taking on the responsibility for changing this long-standing tradition that has been part of our royal heritage for hundreds of years.

"It is long overdue. There have been legislative changes made in wider society like the Equality Act 2010, which makes it illegal for someone to be discriminated against on the basis on their gender in the working environment.

"It is good they've done it now, but it should have been undertaken long ago.

"It's quite difficult changing traditions especially in old institutions like the monarchy."

And she said a good example of being out of touch is the Church's refusal of women bishops.

She said: "It's a shame we can't see all institutions like this following the same patterns of society in general."

Former royal correspondent of the Sun, Harry Arnold, who now lives in Aldington, added:

Name game begins for Kate and Wills

FORMER national newspaper royal correspondent Harry Arnold says he is confident what the names of the Duchess' child will be – whether it is a boy or a girl.

Mr Arnold, who worked for the Sun for many years, developing a close relationship with many of the senior royals, now lives in Aldington, near Ashford.

He explained: "My betting is a girl will be called Elizabeth, because Diana, of course, is not a Queen-y name, and you know what the Royals are like, they are very traditional. And if it's a boy, it will be called George after his great grandfather."

He believes the announcement this week was forced because of Kate's hospitalisation.

He said: "The royal family does usually like to wait before making an announcement in case it all does go wrong.

"But once she went in to hospital, their hand was forced. My guess is they would have liked to have waited another month."

Kate, 30, was taken ill during a visit to her parents on Friday following an official trip to her former prep school St Andrew's.

She was admitted to the King Edward VII Hospital in central London suffering from hyperemesis gravidarum – severe vomiting during pregnancy.

"These changes are long overdue – it's time there was some sexual equality on this sort of thing.

"It will be the first time a first-born daughter becomes monarch no matter what happens after that, and how many sons they have.

"Two of our greatest monarchs have been women – Elizabeth I and Elizabeth II.

"There has been talk about doing this in royal circles over the years. I don't think there was any one thing that sparked actually making the change. It was all part of a general modernisation of the monarchy in Britain."

CHRISTMAS TREAT: There is a specific time of year when the various types of game can be killed

FOOD

Game birds prove a hit as chefs and stars say they are a menu treat

By Joe Bill

joe.bill@archant.co.uk

A SEASON of great Kentish tradition has kicked off in recent weeks, but it's not the upcoming Christmas festivities which have got the county talking.

It is game season in the culinary world with both chefs and diners turning to wild, natural and free-range meats for their winter dishes.

Wild rabbits, pheasant, grouse, ducks and even venison will be on the menu as a winter alternative to the pork, beef and lamb.

The lean meats, which are low in cholesterol and high in protein, have become very popular in recent years as people look to stick to a low-fat diet ahead of the inevitable over indulgence during Christmas.

Each animal has its own specific shooting season dates which generally run across the autumn and winter months when the game is at its best. A curfew on the shooting season is also used to avoid over hunting and doing too much damage to the wildlife population.

Among the fans of the meats is MasterChef presenter Gregg Wallace.

The Whitstable star said: "I'm so impressed with all the game dishes people are cooking – it's very inspiring. We are in the middle of a fantastic game season.

"Game meat has a delicious rich grown-up taste. My favourite has to be partridge and I regularly cook a fantastic recipe given to me by Michel Roux Jnr, but game is a delicious wild, nutritious meat that can be used in anything from curries, stir fries, casseroles and pies."

Game-to-Eat is a campaign backed by the Countryside Alliance, and designed to highlight the benefits of game.

The Alliance says, nationwide, game is stocked in some 10,000 butchers and retailers, as its

IN SEASON...

FOR those looking to get involved with the tradition there is still time.

Pheasant season is between October and February, while partridge, duck and goose starts in September closing in late January.

Hare is available a little longer, from August to February, while rules on hunting deer change from county to county around the UK depending on availability.

For more information, visit the Game Farmers' Association website at www.gfa.org.uk.

OPPONENTS...

ALTHOUGH the tradition of game hunting goes back generations, animal campaign groups strongly oppose it.

The League Against Cruel Sports claim too much wildlife is killed as a result of game shoots, and the killing is more of a sport than for food.

They also claim much of the game shot are from farmed creatures or those imported from abroad.

See www.league.org.uk.

popularity spreads.

Alex Windebank, is head chef at the Michelin recommended The Plough at Stalisfield Green, between Faversham and Ashford.

He said: "We're now in the middle of the game season and so far it has been very productive.

"I always go simple when it comes to using game in dishes as the flavours are great as they are. I avoid going over the top as it can put people off.

"Everyone should give game a try because at the end of the day much of it is considered a sport and the birds are pretty much a bi-product, so they should definitely not be wasted."

Guilty gang sentenced after police crack six-month long crime spree

A GANG who went on a four-month crime spree across the county, stealing vehicles and plant machinery worth more than £100,000, have been sentenced.

The group targeted Land Rovers and also stole a caravan from a secure compound.

Police finally cracked the gang, who hit properties between January and April of 2011, after a complex investigation using automatic number plate recognition cameras and mobile phone records.

All five pleaded guilty, with the final sentence handed out this week.

DC Dave Godden said: "This group targeted innocent people causing them misery.

"It was a long and complex investigation but thoroughly worth it."

The charges related to crimes taking place in Whitstable, Bromley, Aylesham, East Langdon, Tonbridge, Detling, Bredhurst, Borough Green, Gillingham and Newington.

The guilty men and their sentences were: Matthew Wright, from Poachers Close, Chatham (seven-a-half years); William Samuel from Limehouse Court, Sittingbourne and Oliver King, from West Wood Road, Stockbury (both three-and-a-half years); Moses King, from Plum Tree Lane, Stockbury (30 months), Samuel Scadeng, of Oak Close, Borden (two-years-and-nine-months); Paul Edwards, from Conqueror Drive, Gillingham (nine months suspended).

Cleese classic car set to sell in online auction with lunch thrown in

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

LEGENDARY comedy star John Cleese is giving fans the chance to buy his 1987 Bentley in an online auction which concludes this weekend.

The luxury car has sat unused in a friend's garage in Goudhurst for the past year – and at the time of going to press was already attracting bids in excess of £16,000. Offered on auction website eBay, bidding for the Bentley Eight ends this Sunday.

To further tempt would-be buyers, Mr Cleese is also throwing in the opportunity to have lunch with him in London and a signed print of the famous scene in Fawlty Towers where he gives another car – a Morris 1100 – "a damn good thrashing".

Mr Cleese said: "Twenty-five years on, it [the Bentley] is a little faded and needs some TLC to restore it to its natural beauty, including some attention to the battle scars from a quarrel with a gate post the last time I drove it."

"But it remains a fabulous car to drive and is the most beautiful car I have ever owned. It has been utterly reliable and it also removed any sense of haste from my life. You don't drive it, you guide it. Yet, if you need a moment of acceleration, the power surges like a battleship."

The car has more than 73,500 miles on the clock and an MoT which runs out next November.

The highest bidder will also get a handwritten letter signed by Mr Cleese about the car and some of its famous passengers, including Jamie Lee Curtis and Kevin Kline.

Both starred alongside Mr Cleese in the 1988 hit movie A Fish Called Wanda.

Peter Spicer, from The Original Memorabilia Company, which is promoting the sale, said: "The response has been absolutely fantastic.

It's not surprising because he is a superstar and everybody is interested in what he does.

"He has had this car in storage for more than a year now and it is not being used.

"He is living in Monaco so it just makes sense to get rid of it.

"Most people are more interested in having lunch with him than the car."

BIDDING WAR: John Cleese's letter says who has been in the car

BASIL TO BOND

JOHN Cleese has long been established as one of the UK's top comedy performers and writers.

From the explosion of Monty Python onto TV screens in 1969 – and its big screen outings including The Life of Brian – he went on to create perhaps his finest character; the irate Basil Fawlty.

The Torquay hotel owner continues to be hailed as one of Britain's greatest comedy series ever. In the 1980s he enjoyed a revival with the hugely popular A Fish Called Wanda movie and in the 90s appeared as gadget king Q in the James Bond movies.

Last year, he returned to the stage for what he dubbed 'The Alimony Tour' – a reference to his recent divorce which saw him ordered to pay £13 million as a settlement.

Mr Cleese's long-time writing partner was fellow Python Graham Chapman who died at Maidstone Hospital in 1989. Cleese was at his bedside.

Archaeological experts hail 'exciting find' after treasure hunter uncovers rare Iron Age helmet

By Chris Murphy

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

AN AMATEUR treasure hunter, armed with a metal detector, has unearthed one of only four helmets in the world that date back as far as IBC.

The significant discovery was uncovered on farmland near Canterbury two months ago. It is believed to be from the buried remains of a soldier cremated around the time the Romans first arrived.

Now experts from the department of classical and archaeological studies at the University of Kent have helped to confirm its historical importance.

It is made of bronze and was discovered alongside a brooch by the treasure hunter, who wishes to remain anonymous.

So significant is the find, it has to be registered under the Treasure Act (1996). Both the helmet and the brooch will remain at the British Museum where a special report will be prepared.

The age was confirmed by ar-

IMPORTANT: State-of-the-art laser scanner technology was used by experts to date the bronze helmet found on farmland near Canterbury chaeologists using a high resolution contactless scanner, which also produces digital pictures helping to reveal intricate details often hidden by colour variations on the helmet's surface. Other hi-tech equipment also identified tiny hammer indentations in the helmet.

The work was done in partnership with the Canterbury Archaeological Trust.

Dr Steven Willis, a senior lecturer in archaeology and an expert in Iron Age and Roman Britain, said he was delighted to have been able to assist with such a remarkable find for Canterbury and the local area.

He said: "Using laser scanning technology, which has become an essential part of the conservation of objects, we have been able to analyse the helmet from a distance and unlock many details of such an exciting find, such as the manufacture, decoration and use.

"This sort of technology allows the rapid production of accurate and high-resolution digital 3D models of archaeological artefacts, minimising the potential harm associated with the repeated handling of these often fragile objects."

"The technology also ensures any details potentially overlooked by the naked eye are also highlighted."

"The secrets of this helmet are only just beginning to emerge, but we will know much more as the work progresses. More or less intact, helmets of this era are very rare finds; one used as a cremation container, as with this example, is known from Belgium."

Iron Age curator at the British Museum, Julia Farley, called it a "very exciting find".

"In late Iron Age Kent, it was not unusual to bury the cremated remains of the dead in a bag fastened with one or more brooches, but no other cremation has ever been found accompanied by a helmet," she said.

"The owner of this helmet, or the people who placed it in the grave, may have lived through the very beginning of the story of Roman Britain."

It's hoped Canterbury Museum will acquire the rare finds and put them on display.

AWARDS

Time is running out to vote for your favourite food and drink producers

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

THE votes are pouring in for the prestigious Taste of Kent Awards 2013 to celebrate the county's food and drink heroes.

Some 8,000 votes have already been submitted by consumers keen to support their favourite producers and retailers.

Organisers Produced in Kent (PinK), an organisation which champions local food and drink producers, are reporting the return of previous winners into the current top 10 of each category as well as a selection of new names.

According to PinK, voting in the 2013 awards, sponsored by Vertex Law and backed by Archant KOS Media, has proved particularly strong this year in all the drink categories as well as the Kent Butcher or Meat Producer of the Year.

PinK's Stephanie Durling urged the public to not leave it too late to make their views heard.

"Don't be complacent; get online and cast your vote to make sure it counts and the best food and drink producers, and retailers make it through and become one of the three shortlisted finalists," she said.

Kent producers are also invited to nominate themselves in two of the categories; Kent Food Product and Best Kent Food Product of the Year.

All winners will be announced on March 8, 2013, at a glittering ceremony at the Mercure

TASTE OF KENT AWARD CATEGORIES

- 1) Kent Butcher or Meat Producer of the Year
- 2) Best Kentish Beer
- 3) Best Kentish Wine
- 4) Best Kentish Cider or Perry
- 5) Best Kent Juice Producer
- 6) Kent Local Food Retailer of the Year
- 7) Kent Fishmonger of the Year
- 8) Best Kent Food Product of the Year
- 9) Kent Food Product Category Awards (five classes in this category)
- 10) Kent Artisan Food Producer of the Year
- 11) Kent Restaurant of the Year
- 12) Kent Dining Pub of the Year
- 13) Kent Farmers' Market of the Year
- 14) Produced in Kent Award
- 15) Kent Downs and High Weald AONB

Great Danes Hotel in Hollingbourne.

More than a dozen companies are sponsoring individual categories, including Shopper Anonymous, BTTF Partnership and Chapmans of Sevenoaks. They join a long list of supporters: Biddenden Vineyards, Chapel Down Winery, Hadlow College, Kent Downs and High Weald AONBs, Kent County Council, Archant Kent Life, kff (Kent Frozen Foods), NFU Mutual, Opies, sff (Stephen's Fresh Foods), Wilkins Kennedy, Shepherd Neame and Visit Kent.

Media supporters include this newspaper and BBC Radio Kent.

Online voting by the public closes on Wednesday, January 2, 2013. To cast your vote, visit the website at: www.tasteofkentawards.co.uk.

Application forms for the self-nominating categories are also available on the website.

For those wishing to watch the winners be announced, tickets for the Taste of Kent Awards dinner are £90 including a Kentish sparkling wine reception on arrival, a three-course dinner, wine, coffee and chocolates.

CHARITY

Christmas appeal will light up someone's life

THE Joint Rotary Clubs of Thanet are inviting people to sponsor a light in memory of a loved one this Christmas in aid of local charities.

They will appear on the special Tree of Light in Westwood Cross shopping centre in Broadstairs, with personal messages presented in a Book of Remembrance in a lantern at the foot of the tree and on the appeal website.

Organisers ask for a minimum of a £5 donation, which will go to the Pilgrims Hospice and Kids Out, a charity dedicated to bringing fun to the lives of disadvantaged children through day trips.

HOPE: Tree at Westwood

Last year, the Joint Thanet Rotary Clubs raised £1,500 through the appeal, and this year they hope to raise even more, working towards a target of matching the original Tree of Light in Telford, which in its 15th year raised £30,000.

Applications to sponsor a light can be made on the appeal website www.thanet-tree-of-light.co.uk or by picking up a form at Costa Coffee in Westwood Cross or calling the club direct on 01843 833565.

KENT REMEMBERED

STILL STANDING: The footprint of the Hythe barracks is still visible along Hythe's Royal Military Canal

Both fact and fiction link Hythe to British Army

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THE continuing use of the military ranges along the shore at Hythe bear testimony to the Cinque Port's links with the Army.

But once the town itself – with the Royal Military Canal cutting through it – was the centre of much more widespread warlike activity.

At the time of the Napoleonic Wars – which ended with the Battle of Waterloo in 1815 – the whole of east Kent was considered to be in the firing line of any French attack.

The canal was built to obstruct inland movement from any invader and its excavated soil piled on to the bank to make a parapet, behind which troops could be positioned and moved out of sight of the enemy.

The canal also had 'kinks' to allow flanking fire along the length of the water-course, if the enemy should attempt to cross.

Other evidence includes the Martello towers which dot the coastline and the Grand Redoubt fortification, just outside Dymchurch.

But less in evidence today is that during the 19th century the town of Hythe housed one of the most important training facilities for the British Army and together with nearby Shorncliffe was home to many regiments.

Among the British Army units which called Hythe home was the 95th Rifles, the second battalion of which was formed in May 1805, from drafts of men from Hythe Barracks.

HERO: Actor Sean Bean played Richard Sharpe in the TV series

Famous in real life for its use of rifles, rather than the less accurate but easier to fire and maintain muskets, the regiment also boast one of the Army's most famous fictional soldiers.

Richard Sharpe was originally the literary creation of author Bernard Cornwell and as portrayed by actor Sean Bean, is a familiar face from the TV series.

According to his online biography, The Sharpe Compendium, which documents his life, loves and career "taking some volunteers with him" the young Richard Sharpe, recently promoted from the ranks after saving the life of the Duke of Wellington, joined the Hythe-based battalion after returning from fighting in India.

The unit was soon set for action in an effort to prevent the French gaining a foothold in Denmark – as detailed in the un-filmed book Sharpe's Prey.

The fictional biography states: "Sharpe narrowly missed out on the failed Walcheren Expedition. He was supposed to miss out on the Denmark Expedition, but thanks to the intervention of an old ally, he was assigned a special mission that took him into the heart of the bombing of the city of Copenhagen."

Five decades later, Hythe was growing increasing in importance as a military post.

In June 1853, a man named Colonel Hay was tasked with the job of establishing a School of Musketry in the town – a facility which formally opened on April 1 the following year.

Lord Henry Hardinge had commissioned the school which was to instruct soldiers in the rapidly evolving rifle – now the main weapon of the Army.

During World War One the school saw many soldiers undergoing training and machine guns were added to its training classes.

While some of its expertise was based elsewhere the school did not formally close its doors until 1969, when all operations were halted.

Today, road names such as Barrack Hill and Military Road commemorate the past.

And although it can be easily overlooked, the footprint of one of the military buildings does remain. It is sited on public land a few yards from the footpath along the canal and close to the Romney, Hythe and Dymchurch railway station, with a plaque and floor plan close by.

OPINION

Religious role unlike any other

Scholar Robin Gill, feels incoming Archbishop of Canterbury Justin Welby will be the perfect man to unite a divided Anglican Church

ROWAN Williams has been Archbishop of Canterbury for the last decade and has been deeply loved by many Anglicans around the world.

During that time, religious faith has been under attack from new atheists and so many people of faith have been pleased to have an archbishop who has been able to respond intelligently and sensitively to them.

Together with Chief Rabbi Jonathan Sachs, he has shown that faith really can still make sense of a confusing world. Both leaders have also worked hard to create harmony between differing religious groups.

However, Rowan Williams has not been loved by a minority of conservative evangelical Anglicans. They had many misgivings about his 'liberal' views when he was appointed.

They forced him to withdraw his agreement that a celibate gay person could be made a bishop. They persuaded a third of the Anglican bishops around the world not to attend the 2008 Lambeth Conference of Bishops in Canterbury.

And, recently, they were instrumental in rejecting legislation in the General Synod to allow women to be ordained as bishops. This has left the new archbishop, Justin Welby, a mammoth task when he takes over next year.

Fortunately, Dr Welby may have exactly the right skills and background the Church of England needs at the moment. He comes from a more conservative background so there may well be less suspicion of him by some evangelicals.

He worked in the tough oil industry before being ordained 20 years ago. He has worked quietly, but persistently, in troubled parts of Africa and the Middle East trying to negotiate reconciliation between Christians and Muslims.

The troubles of the Church of England are small fry in this context. In interviews he has already shown he is intelligent, self-deprecating, witty and has the common touch.

I suspect that one of the things he will hope to achieve is to move Anglicans on to important issues of justice.

If he can also bring reconciliation to worldwide Anglicans then many of us will be delighted. Anglicans should be able to live peacefully and creatively with differences and help other faith and secular groups to do the same.

Looking to the future, one of the most important global challenges for faith communities will be for them to show that they can contribute positively to peace and justice in the world. Over the last 30 years there has been considerable anxiety as religious fanatics have increasingly resorted to violence. Some people now argue the world would be altogether safer without any religions at all. However, in the 20th century it was secular ideologies that tended to provoke world wars.

Religious leaders such as the Dalai Lama and Desmond Tutu are still deeply respected by the religious and non-religious alike. Both men have dedicated themselves to peaceful reconciliation. Future religious leaders who would do well to follow their examples. Peace and reconciliation are much needed in the world. There is a need for faith communities to contribute positively here.

Is this too much for one man? Time will show, but he has already got off to a good start.

■ Robin Gill is professor of applied theology in the department of religious studies at the University of Kent. He has published extensively and is director of the MA in applied theology.

KOS COMMENT

Pointless behaviour is coming at a high price

YOU don't need telling that dropping litter is an act of selfish laziness.

But quite aside from the fact it spoils the natural beauty of the county in which we all live and work, the cost of having to clear up after those who don't think before they drop is proving an enormous burden on already cash-strapped local authorities.

By the time the cost of cleaning up the mess left by those scrawling graffiti on our walls or fly-tipping is all added up, it's clear the many millions of pounds could be spent better elsewhere in propping up vital services which are currently facing an uncertain future.

Dropping litter is something all age groups are guilty of. The price of doing so now is simply too high.

It's snow joke on trains

JUST last week we trumpeted how the rail operator Southeastern was ready for the winter.

A light dusting later, and the rail network ground to a halt in a rather humiliating fashion.

It would be funny. Just that commuters no longer see the joke.

Flying in the face of reason

AN airport in the Thames Estuary is not a good idea. Kent's roads are already busy with traffic from Dover and the Channel Tunnel, and a main airport should be to the west or north of London to avoid problems with crossing the Thames.

The south east of the country is sinking a few millimeters each year and the north west rising, which will increase the risk of flooding, especially if a lot of infrastructure is built.

There could also be a tidal surge, as there was in 1952, which would flood vast areas.

With climate change, the opposite effect could happen in some years, with severe water shortages. This would be exacerbated with the increased use for an airport, housing etc and we could end up having water rationed, thus affecting farming.

In addition, in the current economic situation people are traveling less and business class passengers are moving down to economy class, so airlines will make less money and possibly reduce flights, nullifying the need for more airport space.

Ex RAF base good solution

AN airport floating secured to the seabed off Whitstable. What planet are these people on?

A simple solution: the Government is closing RAF Lyneham. Turn it into a civilian airport with direct links to London via the M4.

Barmy Boris in it for himself

Sorry, I must have been mistaken for thinking the UK was in recession like the rest of the world.

But we seem to have a Mayor of London that thinks it clever to waste £50 billion of taxpayers' money just so he can make a name for himself, irrelevant of the great proportion of the British public now living in poverty.

This mad Boris just wants the whole of the country to pay for a new hub airport in the Thames Estuary just so he can call it 'Boris Island'.

Boris Island, named after a man that doesn't even know how to comb his hair.

The article you ran last week states that David Cameron previously ruled out a third runway at Heathrow, but Mr Johnson is continuing to push for an estuary airport.

To build a hub airport in the Thames Estuary will result in even greater congestion, on both sides of the river Thames.

Manston Airport has the new road network straight off the M2, it is surrounded by fields that could become long stay car parks and flights in and out of Manston come straight from over the sea.

Passengers travelling to Manston are travelling away from London, away from the congested city, and anything is a great advantage to traffic if it's heading away from the congested M25.

Lydd Airport is another option, has all the facilities necessary for holidaymakers and, like Manston, is just sitting there waiting to be used.

Southend Airport should also be considered as it has good road links, the A127/A12 joining up with the M25 and London.

Another benefit these local airports will bring, especially to operators like Easyjet, Ryanair, Monarch etc, is the charge for using the airport would be a great amount cheaper than using inner London airports, thus this would make flights cheaper so creating more passengers.

Justice must lead the way

An open letter from the President of the Magistrates' Association, Kent branch, to the Police and Crime Commissioner for Kent.

DEAR Mrs Barnes,

For several years magistrates have been expressing concern about the fast increasing number of detected crimes which are not reaching court, but are being dealt with behind the closed doors of police stations, or by officers on the street, by means of Out of Court Disposals (OCDs).

These are often used when an offender is minded to admit to an offence during his encounter with the police, rather than being tested in a public court, and can take the form of anything from a simple or conditional caution to a penalty notice.

If the offender fails to pay the penalty – and it is reported that about half of them do fail – then the court cannot reopen the original case, but merely deals with non-payment.

OCDs often result in outcomes well outside the sentencing guidelines which judges and magistrates are obliged to follow in order to achieve appropriate sentences and fines.

Frequently they result in offenders being treated far more leniently than they would be in court and without publicity. It hardly needs to be said that a court appearance would prove to be a far greater deterrent than a caution or penalty notice issued by the police, especially where offenders have been known to receive a series of penalties or cautions for successive offences and without a proper court conviction.

Even as far back as 2007, more than 100,000 cautions were issued nationally for offences which might otherwise have reached a magistrates' court.

Although Kent is slightly below the national trend, there were some very worrying figures for 2010/11 with 41 per cent of 'detected' offences never reaching court. OCDs were applied to 49 per cent of cases of criminal damage, 46 per cent of violence against the person and 47 per cent of theft and handling.

Magistrates are not for a moment suggesting every minor case should come to court, and there will be occasions when a stern caution will be absolutely right, but the vast majority of the offences in question are not the trivial kind that might have earned a clip round the ear from the village bobby in my boyhood.

Too many OCD cases involve considerable loss or suffering to innocent people who are denied the satisfaction of seeing the perpetrators dealt with by a court of law or, worse, are deprived of the compensation for loss or injury which that court could order.

I invite you to look into these concerns and examine a trend whereby police officers are increasingly becoming judge, jury and executioner.

A less opaque regime would cause a change in budget allocations, but which is to be most treasured in our free society – balancing the books or balancing the Scales of Justice?

Robert Howe, President of the Kent Branch – Magistrates' Association

SMOKING: Michael Fallon, Minister of State for Business and Enterprise, centre, was among the guests at SWEEP for a demonstration of the all-new furnace that will be vital in stopping the harmful lead and glass that is currently going into landfill sites

Furnace provides answer to a burning ecological issue

Plant is capable of capturing lead and glass from old TV and computer screens

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

A SOLUTION to an ever-increasing global ecological problem has been unveiled at a plant in Sittingbourne.

SWEEP Kuusakoski is an Anglo-European company that has developed the world's first glass furnace with the capacity to recover lead and glass from old television and computer screens.

As technology advances, these obsolete devices are being dumped in landfill and can cause big ecological issues because of their heavy-metal content.

The problem is particularly acute in the US, and representatives from America, Sri Lanka, Australia, China and many European countries were on hand to watch the unveiling.

Sevenoaks MP Michael Fallon, Minister of State for Business and Enterprise, also watched the demonstration.

The plant works by sorting the components of the sets by hand and separating the leaded glass from circuit boards and other equipment that can be recycled. The screens are then heated to 1,000°C, which separates the glass and the lead.

The metal is cooled and forms small pebbles, which can then be sold. About two tonnes are produced a day; each tonne is worth £1,300 on the open market.

The molten glass is also recovered and can be re-used.

In all, the company reclaims 97.34 per cent of all the materials it processes.

Previously the technology to do this had not existed, but with this technological breakthrough 1,000 screens can be dealt with per day as the plant operates 24 hours.

Fallon told 150 delegates from the fields of recycling, business and local authorities: "This new furnace will help tackle the growing global recycling problem of old television sets and computer screens.

"It's continued success, employing nearly 170 people, is great news for Kent. The green economy is at the heart of our economic recovery."

Justin Greenaway, contract manager at the furnace, left, said: "There is an environmental issue here and the solution is right here in Sittingbourne."

The technology will now be made available elsewhere, with construction of similar plants in other countries looking likely in the near future.

Medway looks to creative industries as way forward in bringing new life to high streets

A MOVE to regenerate part of Medway by bringing back into use empty buildings and offering them to creative businesses and artists is on its way.

Project Recreate is aiming to establish a host of new jobs and opportunities for business expansion by renovating properties along the road, which links the high streets of Chatham and Rochester.

More than £400,000 has already been approved and a bid for an extra £350,000 is under way for the European project, which is part of the Interreg IVA France (Channel) England programme, co-financed by the European Regional Development Fund.

Medway Council's portfolio holder for strategic development and economic growth, Jane Chitty, said: "We already have some successful creative businesses in Medway, so we know it's an area where there's potential for growth.

"Team that with the fact we have four universities, including one of the country's leading creative universities, and this project seemed like the perfect fit for us."

Medway is one of 11 areas taking part in the project and the intention is to create three new business, exhibition and teaching spaces from empty commercial premises – including in the Sun Wharf building in Chatham and at Rochester Riverside.

The new spaces, which are set to open by next autumn, aim to help up to 55 entrepreneurs or creative businesses set up shop, particularly local artists, designers and graduates.

The funding will be used to equip the buildings with studio, performance and showcasing spaces as well as digital-media facilities, seminar spaces and study rooms.

Businesses will also be able to take part in cross-border webinars, workshops and advice sessions to help them establish trade links.

Cllr Chitty said: "By investing in this stretch of the high street, which in recent years has already seen a range of new businesses, we aim to create a lively and exciting space for shoppers that has its own unique identity and form a natural link between the independent retailers in Rochester and the national high-street stores in Chatham.

"It's another example of our work to invest and promote our high streets by thinking innovatively, and I'm excited to see it get under way."

INNOVATION: Jane Chitty

Book reveals secret of how to grow in difficult times... and you can get a free copy

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

ADVICE on how to prosper in tough times is contained in a new book by Andy Page, of Canterbury-based PH Accountancy.

Why Businesses Stop Growing And What You Can Do About It is co-authored with Steve Hackney, one of the UK's leading marketing and business-growth experts, and reveals the secrets of how to create a highly-successful business – even in today's difficult economy.

The authors say it shows business-owners exactly what to do and what to avoid.

Page said: "For more than 18 years I have been helping small and medium-sized businesses to manage the financial challenges they face from start-up to growth and through to maturity. I've assembled a wealth of knowledge and thought it was time to put pen to paper – so many business-owners can benefit from my expertise."

"When I was conducting the research for the book, I was surprised to discover there wasn't one book which addressed the financial aspects of running a business combined with how to develop it."

"As far as I'm concerned, they both go hand in hand. That's why I teamed up with Steve."

"He is considered by many to be one of the world's leading sales and marketing experts."

"The result is a unique book that gets to the heart of running a successful business, combining best-practice financial-management solutions with leading-edge sales and marketing strategies."

"Companies should always make sure they are ready for growth and that the foundations are in place, then ensure all the procedures are properly working. The book covers this and shows how to move forward."

The book shows business-owners how to:

- systematically and strategically grow their business from the ground up.

- use the 4 'Business Multipliers' to get exponential growth.
- successfully apply 'The 5 Ms Of Growing Your Business'.
- easily manage the financial challenges that every business faces.
- take complete financial control of their business and much more.

Hackney said he was also delighted with the outcome of the book.

"Co-authoring any book is risky because you put your reputation on the line with the other author," he said.

"However, I had no hesitation in putting this

NOVEL IDEA: Andy Page, who co-wrote the book, has a wealth of experience in helping businesses book together with Andy. His wealth of knowledge and expertise in helping small and medium-sized businesses to navigate through the financial pressures and stresses of running and developing a business is second to none.

"The book will help any business-owner looking to expand, and the examples packed through the book make it very easy for the reader to apply the strategies we discuss."

• As a Christmas present for readers, we have secured five free copies of the book (RRP £30); they are available to anyone running their own business.

To get a copy, phone Andy Page's office on 01227 277667 by the closing date of Friday, December 21.

Solicitors' practice takes on talented Louise to help its elderly clients get peace of mind

AS PART of its commitment to retaining promising young achievers, law firm Furley Page has appointed one of its newly-qualified solicitors to its elderly-client team.

Louise Mathias-Williams, 26, from Canterbury, undertakes Court of Protection work, helping elderly or vulnerable clients who have lost capacity and need assistance to deal with their affairs, as well as advising on care-fee funding issues and NHS continuing-care claims, preparing lasting powers of attorney and drafting wills based on a client's individual circumstances.

She spent two years training with Furley Page, which has offices in Canterbury, Chatham and Whitstable, and is part of a specialised team that provides a range of services for older or vulnerable clients who are becoming confused and struggling to look after their affairs, or who may be suffering from dementia.

The team is led by partner Nicola

Rostron, who has years of experience in dealing with delicate legal matters surrounding elderly clients and carers. Rostron is also a panel deputy for the Court of Protection.

The team also includes chartered legal executive Val Prosser, who has spent more than 20 years working with elderly and vulnerable clients, solicitor Joshua Williams and legal assistant Garry Wootton.

Rostron said: "Louise has an excellent understanding of the issues that affect the elderly, which can often be very complicated and daunting. Her friendly, professional approach is greatly appreciated by clients."

Mathias-Williams, who graduated from Warwick University with a first in English literature, began her legal studies in 2008 at the College of Law in London, where she achieved a commendation in the graduate diploma in law and a distinction in the legal-practice course.

ACQUISITION

LIFT-OFF: Checkmate has expanded business

Buyout will allow firm to reach new heights

SHEERNESS company Checkmate Lifting And Safety, which designs and makes height safety and textile lifting equipment, has acquired the specialist wind-turbine business of Truman & Hall Safety Training.

The acquisition means HART, Checkmate's dedicated height safety and rescue training business, will be able to provide clients with a wider range of courses, ranging from below ground to high-level rescue and training.

Oliver Auston, Checkmate managing director, said: "This important acquisition underpins our commitment to our work at height training business HART."

"It will give the company a broader range of disciplines to suit its enviable client base and will hopefully secure HART as a significant player in the industry."

Andy Stock, of HART, said: "This is such an exciting opportunity for HART to really develop the training division and we are always on the lookout for professional, enthusiastic and qualified instructors to grow the business further."

EVENT

Networking Hub is place to learn valuable lessons

BASEPOINT Folkestone will be hosting its next 'Networking Hub', a free networking event, on Wednesday, December 12, with talks on how to hire apprentices and understanding employment laws.

The guest speaker at the event, Ann-Marie Liddiard, has worked in the skills and welfare industry for more than 15 years, and in that time has secured £25 million of Government funding to help businesses develop individuals for the workplace.

She now works at Fusion Futures, a recruitment agency that specialises in sourcing the best apprentices for businesses, and will be talking about how SMEs can source and hire apprentices.

Also speaking at the event is Veronica Fox from HR+ Limited, a professional HR and training consultancy, who will explain how businesses can comply with employment laws and utilise HR best practice.

Basepoint centre manager Lorraine May said: "We have some fantastic speakers lined up for our Networking Hub, with a real focus on how to employ the best possible candidates and make businesses more profitable."

The next Networking Hub is taking place from noon to 2pm. Attendees will be provided with lunch and refreshments – all free of charge.

To book a place, email folkestone@basepoint.co.uk or phone 01303 298298.

Training, courses and careers

Dockyard to host college's latest e-learning project

A SUBSIDIARY of MidKent College has this week launched a new enterprise designed to deliver bespoke e-learning solutions across a range of key markets.

MKC Training Services' Cirrus e-learning scheme is based in the Joiners' Shop, within Chatham's Historic Dockyard.

Cirrus e-Learning's development team have an impressive background, having delivered more than 500 e-learning projects and collected numerous industry awards.

The team already has a strong base to build on, as MKC Training Services has developed a range of e-learning solutions through its training contract at the Royal School of Military Engineering.

MKC Training Services managing director Andrew Brader explained: "Our background in education, through our links with MidKent College, gives us a unique perspective on developing learning materials.

"We wanted to use this specialist insight to create e-learning materials that really work for learners."

"Whilst we'll use state-of-the-art tools and techniques, our expertise in education and our understanding of how people learn will keep the needs of the learner as our top priority."

"We'll apply these principles to every course we create."

To find out more about Cirrus e-learning, visit www.cirruslearning.com or email info@cirruslearning.com.

IoD deal paves the way ahead for business graduates at uni

STUDENTS looking to break into the world of business fresh from emerging from university have been given a helping hand courtesy of a new initiative.

The University of Kent and the Institute of Directors (IoD) have launched a new partnership scheme which will enable students to become members of the organisation before they graduate.

It is hoped by opening up the opportunity to join, it will increase graduates networking opportunities, and allow them to gain a better insight into the highly competitive - and currently very challenging - business world.

The IoD is UK-based organisation designed to support, represent and set standards for company directors.

It currently has more than 40,000 members, with offices set up in a host of major UK cities, for the use of members.

It hopes to benefit from the deal with an influx of fresh blood into the organisation.

The university's Kent Business School (KBS) is the only higher education institution in the county to be chosen by the IoD to take part in the new scheme, which was launched at KBS's Canterbury campus building recently.

What is your business doing to help Keep Kent Working? Do you send employees on training courses to aid their personal development or run apprenticeship schemes? If you have a good news story email editorial@kosmedia.co.uk or call us on 01303 817000.

The IoD hopes to attract new members through partnerships with a limited number of universities across the country.

Dr Sue Hornibrook, head of student placements at KBS Canterbury, said: "This is excellent news for our students taking part in the scheme as it will enhance their employability.

"They'll have access to IoD events, forums, mentoring and placement opportunities.

"It also benefits the IoD, enabling it to benefit from younger members and international insights and connections, as well as new enterprise."

Under the scheme, free membership of the IoD will be offered to all KBS second year students who have registered for a year-in-industry degree and some students on other modules.

Meanwhile, in another boost to the university, Michael Killing, professor of computer science, has been named winner of the Outstanding Contribution to Computer Science Education award by the Association for Computing Machinery (ACM) Special Interest Group for Computer Science Education (SIGCSE).

The international award recognises his work in the computer science education field which centres on the development of software tools and material for the teaching and learning of programming in schools and universities.

Professor Killing said: "It is a great honour that the work on these systems has been recognised on an international level for the contributions they make to computer science education."

Providing vital skills to feed the demands of local industry

LEADER of Kent County Council, Paul Carter, officially relaunched an initiative designed to prepare youngsters with vital skills for the world of work on Tuesday.

Dignitaries from across the area gathered during the afternoon to mark the return of the Thanet Skills Studio.

It runs a variety of workshops with a view to providing youngsters aged between 16 and 24 with the skills that local employers want in what is currently a challenging marketplace.

Among those skills being taught are engineering, health and social care, catering, IT, vehicle mechanics and joinery.

One of the showcase projects under way is the building of an iconic Caterham Seven sports car from scratch by motor vehicle students, with sponsorship from Broadstairs and St Peter's Rotary Club.

The centre, based on Enterprise Road on the Westwood Industrial Estate, staged a special event to mark its relaunch, with included speeches from invited guests and the choir from the Hartsdown Academy.

Those attending were able to look around the facilities and speak to students and tutors.

Run in association with the Hartsdown Academy, which runs Hartsdown Technical College, invited guests for the event included Thanet Conservative MPs Sir Roger Gale and Laura Sandys, the chief executive of the East Kent Chamber of Commerce David Foley, and representatives from the worlds of business, education and civic leaders.

Praise for academic glory

PARENTS, students and teachers celebrated the success of youngsters from the Bishop of Rochester Academy at a special event held in the historic surroundings of Rochester Cathedral.

The Academy Day saw students pick up their awards for their efforts, while there were also displays from the academy's talented musicians and performers.

Invited guests in attendance included Colin Searle from the Department for Education, Medway Council's children's services director Barbara Peacock, and a number of local councillors, vicars from local churches, and the head teachers of a number of other local schools.

The academy is looking to go from strength-to-strength with the opening next year of a new £23m building on its existing site.

It hopes the building will become not just the surroundings for the academy, but a hub for the local community.

HIGHWAYS - SHEPWAY AREA

A260 CANTERBURY ROAD, FOLKESTONE
(10 MPH SPEED LIMIT) TEMPORARY ORDER 2012
THE ROAD TRAFFIC REGULATION ACT 1984
AS AMENDED BY THE ROAD TRAFFIC
(TEMPORARY RESTRICTIONS) ACT 1991

For the safety of the public and workforce during the refurbishment of bridge expansion joints, Kent County Council has made an Order imposing a temporary maximum speed limit of 10 miles per hour on the A260 Canterbury Road, Folkestone, on or after 10 December 2012 for up to 4 nights, between 20:00 hrs through until 06:00 hrs each night.

This affects the section of road in the vicinity of the bridge over the A20 Trunk Road.

The Order applies when the relevant signs are on display, and is in conjunction with temporary traffic lights and a "Convoy System" to escort traffic through the roadworks.

There will also be a 40 mph Speed Limit in advance of the works, as follows

A260 CANTERBURY ROAD - northbound - to the north of the junction with Crete Road West northwards to a point beyond the roadworks

A260 WHITEHORSE HILL - southbound - to the south of the White Horse Hill Roundabout southwards to a point beyond the roadworks

ALKHAM VALLEY ROAD - westbound - from the entrance to Khimera Farm to where it joins the A260 Canterbury Road

The speed limits will only apply when the convoy working is in place, and the relevant signs are displayed on site.

DARBY ROAD (FOOTPATH), FOLKESTONE
(RESTRICTIONS ON PEDESTRIANS)
TEMPORARY ORDER 2012

THE ROAD TRAFFIC REGULATION ACT 1984
AS AMENDED BY THE ROAD TRAFFIC
(TEMPORARY RESTRICTIONS) ACT 1991

Because of improvement works, Kent County Council has made an Order to prohibit the pedestrian use of the footpath linking Darby Road with Foord Road North, Folkestone, on or after 10 December 2012 for up to 2 weeks. There will be a further closure from 7 January 2013 for up to 1 week.

The footpath will be closed for its entire length.

The alternative route is via Darby Road, Darby Place, Guildhall Street North, Copthall Gardens, Grace Hill and Foord Road.

HIGHWAYS - TONBRIDGE & MALLING AREA

THE KENT COUNTY COUNCIL

(VARIOUS ROADS, PADDOCK WOOD)
(WEIGHT RESTRICTION) ORDER 2012
ROAD TRAFFIC REGULATION ACT 1984

NOTICE is hereby given that the Kent County Council has made an Order under Sections 1 and 2 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984, the effect of which would be to:-

Prohibit any vehicle, laden or unladen with a gross weight which exceeds 7.5 tonnes to proceed along both Lucks Lane and Wagon Lane, Paddock Wood, from their junctions with Maidstone Road (B2160) to their junctions with Queen Street.

Access rights will be maintained for all vehicles requiring legitimate access to or from any premises situated on these roads.

This will be for improving the amenities of the area through which the road runs.

A copy of the proposed Order, which comes into operation on 10/12/2012, together with an explanatory statement and a map showing the lengths of roads concerned may be inspected during normal office hours at County Hall, Maidstone, Kent, ME14 1XQ or at the offices of the Kent County Council Highways Depot, Javelin Way, Ashford, TN24 8AD.

Anyone may, by application to the High Court within 6 weeks of the date of publication of this Notice, challenge the validity of the Orders or of any provision contained in them on the grounds that it is not within the powers conferred by the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984, or any instrument made thereunder, or that there has been a failure to comply with any statutory requirement in relation to the Orders..

1) Implement a 40 mph per hour speed limit along Lady Oak Lane (B2079) from its junction with London Road (A21) to a point 775 metres north of this junction.
2) Implement a 50 mph per hour speed limit along Lady Oak Lane and Bedgebury Road (B2079) from a Point 775 metres north of it junction with London Road (A21) to a point 250 metres south of its junctions with Balcombes Hill.

A copy of the proposed Order, which comes into operation on 10/12/2012, together with an explanatory statement and a map showing the lengths of roads concerned may be inspected during normal office hours at County Hall, Maidstone, Kent, ME14 1XQ or at the offices of the Kent County Council Highways Depot, Javelin Way, Ashford, TN24 8AD.

Anyone may, by application to the High Court within 6 weeks of the date of publication of this Notice, challenge the validity of the Orders or of any provision contained in them on the grounds that it is not within the powers conferred by the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984, or any instrument made thereunder, or that there has been a failure to comply with any statutory requirement in relation to the Orders.

THE KENT COUNTY COUNCIL

(VARIOUS ROADS, TUNBRIDGE WELLS)
(PROHIBITION OF MOTOR VEHICLES) ORDER 2012

NOTICE is hereby given that the Kent County Council in exercise of their powers under Sections (1) and (2) of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 and of all other enabling powers, and after consultation with the Chief Officer of Police in accordance with Part III of Schedule 9 to the Act, has made an Order, the effect of which would be to:-

Prohibit any motor vehicle or mechanically propelled vehicles along the length of the service road fronting properties 279 to 321 St Johns Road and along the entire length of St Johns Park, Tunbridge Wells.

Access rights will be maintained for all vehicles requiring legitimate access to or from any property situated on these roads.

A copy of the proposed Order, which comes into operation on 10/12/2012, together with an explanatory statement and a map showing the lengths of roads concerned may be inspected during normal office hours at County Hall, Maidstone, Kent, ME14 1XQ or at the offices of the Kent County Council Highways Depot, Javelin Way, Ashford, TN24 8AD.

Anyone may, by application to the High Court within 6 weeks of the date of publication of this Notice, challenge the validity of the Orders or of any provision contained in them on the grounds that it is not within the powers conferred by the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984, or any instrument made thereunder, or that there has been a failure to comply with any statutory requirement in relation to the Orders.

THE INTERVIEW

Journeymen finally make the big time

From busking to performing for the stars, Jason King tells Joe Bill how The Gypsy Queens have quietly achieved success

WHAT do Paul McCartney, Dolly Parton, Norah Jones and Michael Bublé all have in common? Other than fame, fortune and a stack of hit records, of course. Each of them started out as buskers.

Well, now there's another name to take the street-music mantle as The Gypsy Queens set Europe alight.

Newly signed to Universal's London Records, five musicians who met on the streets of Nice in France will leave behind them the days of passing around an ashtray to collect money.

The Gypsy Queens will release their debut album on Monday, December 10, and contrabass-player Jason King from Kent could not be happier.

"Queens kind of started about 10 years ago, and I've only been in the band for about four.

"It began with a group of musicians travelling around from Switzerland to Paris to Nice, following the tourists and busking on the streets. That's where the band came from."

Jason grew up in East Farleigh, near Maidstone, attending what is now the Cornwallis Academy before turning his interest in music into a successful career.

"As I was growing up, I got into going to country pubs and meeting blues and funk guys and just jamming with them.

"I was also playing in bands and working in London quite a lot, but I found this bar in Nice who used to have these English bands come across and play, so I used to go out there on little working holidays.

"The Gypsy Queens came and played there and that's when I met them."

The Queens are made up of Italian lead singer Didier Casnati, Mexican drummer Manuel Polin, Norwegian guitarist Anders Klunderud and American saxophonist Jay Metcalfe, who all met while playing their instruments on the streets.

"The group needed a new bass-player and I had started jamming with them and they asked me to join. I'm quite a big fan of spending time somewhere sunny and amazing, so when this opportunity came up I just said yes."

"When I came back to England from that particular working holiday, I moved out of my apartment, sold all my stuff and moved to France. I have been on the road ever since."

With a settled line-up in The Gypsy Queens, success gained momentum, King remembers.

"People started inviting the band to play at their parties and dinners and it snowballed from there. It had been building up slowly before it exploded."

"The big-break moment came when we met the head of the label that signed us. He was working for Universal, came and watched us a few times and loved us – that's when it got big."

The band went on to play for Elton John, Rod Stewart, Quincy Jones, Robert De Niro, Brad Pitt, David Beckham, Prince William, Prince Harry and 44 heads of state, becoming the go-to group for exclusive parties and events.

In an era of reality TV pop idols, The Gypsy Queens have done it the hard way, racking up more than 3,000 gigs in 44 countries, taking the word-of-mouth method to a whole new level.

King, 39, said: "We have played for Bono and Janet Jackson, proper superstars, so it's always kind of nerve-racking when you know you're going to play for these people."

"But when you turn up to their party and they're all having dinner, that kind of disappears because you realise they're just normal people having dinner and enjoying themselves."

The Queens' big break came about two years ago when the band were playing their usual gig in Nice's Le Petite Maison and in walked Nick Raphael, then working for Sony, now the newly-installed president of a reborn London Records

So the story goes, U2's Bono was also in the restaurant that night and he and Queens lead singer Casnati were swapping jokes during the show, which had Raphael enquiring as to who the group were. The rest is history.

The name could be seen as an endorsement of the group's regal qualities, but they're not to be confused with the very popular Gypsy Kings.

"Didier gave us the name about eight years ago for a laugh and it just stuck. After 10 years of gigging, people get to know the name, so you can't change it."

"The Gypsy Kings are really cool guys – we

MAKING ALL THE RIGHT NOISES:
Jason King, second right, joined The Gypsy Queens after jamming with them when the band played a gig in Nice have played for them and with them a few times and they're a great bunch, so there's no rivalry there."

The Queens even borrow one of the Kings' most recognised songs, Volare, for their new album.

"We also do a great cover of Marrakesh Express by Crosby, Stills & Nash. It's an old song, but we were really happy to get to record that, especially as it features Graham Nash himself – it was a bit of a dream come true."

The eponymous debut LP features the much-loved L'Americano featuring Madeleine Peyroux, as well as the track Ventura Highway featuring Booker T Jones and Dewey Bunnell.

The band's rustic sound has attracted fans from across the globe.

"We're travelling all the time, playing for Spanish people, French people or Italians, so our album has become of a mixture of songs. It's good fun to not just do standard pop or rock all the time. It's nice to bang out the varied tracks."

The Gypsy Queens play up to 200 shows a year, but they are offered at least 600, with Kent firmly on the list for King to try to squeeze in at some point.

"The future? Well, I'll be honest with you. It is an absolute adventure – none of us really know what to expect."

"At the end of the day we're a bunch of buskers, so whatever happens we'll just fit in with it."

PERFECT CHRISTMAS

Make sure this festive season is as wonderful as Christmases past

WHEN that troublesome snowman melts and the little boy is devastated to find his new pal gone... that is the moment Christmas is encapsulated.

The hope that the snowman brings, the joy that he gives to the little boy, is what everyone should feel during the festive season.

It is a time to relax, to spend time with your family, to catch up with old friends and a time when we can all spread some cheer. That doesn't have to come through the endless giving of presents – it can be making a gesture in the office such as bringing in cakes for everyone to share; it can be as simple as saying "Merry Christmas!" as you pass each other in the street.

We as a nation should take this opportunity to be happy and try to put aside the problems that might plague us during the rest of the year.

There is no other time of year when everyone can tune in to hear angelic carols or popular Christmas classics or over-indulge in rich foods and sip the traditional mulled wine. The four-week period from the beginning of December to New Year is an exception, so take your chance to have fun!

Christmas is a time for romance and family, take your loved ones on a magical journey to meet Santa at one of Kent's many grottoes, or take a sleigh-ride with reindeer to enhance the experience.

Alternatively, you could just settle down in front of the fire and tuck in to some pudding.

Remember that waking up on Christmas morning is the most exciting thing in the world for youngsters – let them be young and dream of meeting Saint Nicholas.

Remember the glass of milk, the half-eaten mince pie and the carrot for the reindeer; it's all part of the magic. Let Nat King Cole remind you of a Christmas past and cross your fingers to see snowflakes falling as December 25th rolls round once more.

Everyone has their own vision of what Christmas should be and what it means to them, but just use the time available to rejoice and be happy – goodness knows we work hard enough for it during the other 11 months of the year!

Don't be home alone, don't be a grinch, don't think it's uncool to try a festive woolly jumper or wear a paper crown at the dinner table.

Embrace the time of year and it will embrace you.

Vincenzo service and a great menu show chain Italians aren't Don deal

Italian chain restaurants dominate many a high street across the UK, with the likes of Zizzi, Prezzo, Pizza Express and Ask doing very nicely thanks to their value food and simplistic approach to service. Their always-enticing voucher-offers took hold of me for a time until I could eat Italian food no more, so a six-month break ensued.

I have walked past the Don Vincenzo restaurant in Rochester many times and, from the condensation on the windows and blurred outlines of customers, its popularity seems unquestionable. Time to break my Italian fast and get stuck in!

The authenticity hits you from the start, with the traditional tables huddled together so only the well-practised waiting staff are able to nip between them without any upheaval.

The rack of wines, the crucifix on the wall and the Italian TV all scream tradition, as do the staff, who converse in the native tongue. Behind the high counter the chef's head bobs up and down, with the occasional toss of dough into the air as the smell of freshly-cooked pizza fills the arena.

Fresh bread with oil and vinegar joined us at the table as my guest and I chose our starters. He went for the melanzan alla parmigiana – aubergine layers with mozzarella, basil, Parmesan and tomato sauce. The plate was cleared and a nod of the head was enough to show me that the dish was approved. The portion size was perfect also. I went for the antipasto di salumi italiani, a mixture of cured meats and olives including Parma ham, salami and prescuitto. All excellent flavours and presented nicely.

I felt that maybe some salad or a little extra bread would have made the dish perfect. For mains, my guest went vegetarian and tried the cannelloni vegetariani – pancakes filled with ricotta cheese and spinach, submerged in a tomato and béchamel white sauce.

A quick taste of the little my guest allowed me meant I could confirm again the use of fresh ingredients and no stodge, which can sometimes come over with a cannelloni. I went for the linguine alla putanesca – linguine pasta with capers, olives and anchovies in a tomato sauce.

That fresh fishy taste of the sardines and capers was strong but not overpowering. The pasta was cooked to perfection and the portion size was again excellent for what could easily become an over-filling dish. The black olives were too little and too few to add an extra dimension to the taste, but this was a really enjoyable dish.

To finish, I went for the slightly-overpriced (£6) torta al cioccolato: warm chocolate cake served with Italian vanilla ice-cream.

I tend to stick by the rule that a dessert has to be exceptional to be more than £5 in a high-street restaurant, but the cake came close to changing my mind. It was covered in the cocoa gold without being too sickly, while the warm sponge and ice-cream cold always satisfies.

The service was good and the price with drinks just £55, proving that the traditional eatery really can break the chains.

Website will reveal the cleanest places to eat

A FOOD-hygiene campaign that will help people decide where to eat has been launched in Maidstone.

The Food Hygiene Rating Scheme is being welcomed by switched-on pubs, clubs and food businesses as a way of attracting business by highlighting their high standards of cleanliness.

There are 500 businesses in the Maidstone borough with a rating of 5, and those invited to the launch event at Maidstone United's Gallagher Stadium were selected randomly from the top-scorers.

The new system allows the public to check the ratings of venues simply by visiting www.food.gov.uk/ratings.

Christmas Day on a plate at Rocksalt

AS part of a growing trend, the latest county restaurant to announce its own Christmas Day menu is Rocksalt in Folkestone.

Mark Sargeant's eatery will remain open across the festive period, offering meals on Christmas Eve for £75 per person, Christmas Day for £85 per person and New Year's Eve for £95 each.

In addition to these, there is a festive-party menu priced at just £30 per person for three courses, with a canape-and-bowlfood menu on the bar at £35 per person.

Canterbury Cathedral

Friday, December 14, at 7pm
01227 787787
www.canterbury.co.uk

CANTERBURY Choral Society's annual Family Carols event at Canterbury Cathedral will have something a little different this year.

The group has commissioned one of the UK's most performed and respected composers, Paul Patterson, to write a new carol, which will be premiered by the society and the youth choir at the event.

The text for the new carol was taken from a 13th-century medieval verse and is entitled Beyond The Day and is for choir, organ and brass.

Richard Cooke, conductor and artistic director, said: "We were left a legacy and decided to commission a new carol which would be a legacy in itself."

Adult tickets for Family Carols are priced at £7; children under 16 pay £4.

AFTER successful gigs featuring the likes of Will Young and Tears For Fears, the Forestry Commission has announced legendary punk band Blondie will play next year.

The New Yorkers will headline the mini-festival at Bedgebury Pinetum as part of the annual concert series Forest Live.

Blondie are known for such hits as Denis, Heart Of Glass, Atomic and Call Me.

Support will come from indie rockers The Lightning Seeds.

All money raised at the gigs is put back into the Forestry Commission. Tickets are on sale now priced at £36.

Overnight stay at wild animal park bags top tourism award... yet again

By Joe Bill

joe.bill@archant.co.uk

THE unique overnight African adventure at Port Lympne's Wild Animal Park won the Best Tourism Experience at The Beautiful South Awards.

Livingstone Lodge, which houses guests just feet away from the open safari and watering hole at the park, took the gold award for a second year in a row.

Bob O'Connor, managing director of Howletts and Port Lympne Wild Animal Parks, said: "This speaks volumes about the high quality of our product, from the authentic ranger-guided safari to the mouthwatering dinner, and further highlights the hard work and dedication of the Livingstone Lodge team."

"In these tough economic times, travelling to Africa to a safari lodge is not easily affordable – at Livingstone Lodge you really feel as though you are in Africa as you take a safari with our rangers to watch the giraffe, black rhino, zebra and wildebeest roaming freely over 100 acres of Kentish savannah."

Livingstone Lodge is very popular because it is so authentic – it's a window to Africa, a wonderful experience that underlines the importance of conservation."

The lodge is the only authentic overnight safari experience in the UK, offering visitors a magical night under the stars and African fine dining

TASTE OF AFRICA: Port Lympne's Livingstone Lodge offers fine dining, with dusk and morning safaris and safaris at dusk and the following morning.

Since the lodge opened in 2007, it has been awarded many accolades, including Best Tourism Experience in regional awards 2009, 2010 and 2011 and was further awarded England's Best Tourism Experience in 2010 and 2012 at the prestigious Visit England Awards.

O'Connor said: "The season has now closed at the lodge, but we are already taking bookings for 2013, and of course we have our luxury cottage – open all-year-round. It's perfect for a pre-Christmas getaway."

Restaurant is spinning after 'curry Oscar' win

A KENT restaurant triumphed at the annual British Curry Awards, held last week.

Claiming the crown for the Best Newcomer Restaurant in the South East was Westerham's Shampain 4 – At The Spinning Wheel.

The team from the Grays Road eatery were presented their gong by the awards founder Enam Ali MBE and Dragon's Den star Theo Paphitis.

A pioneering force in the UK catering and hospitality sector, the British Curry Awards have been lauded as a pivotal UK institution, with Prime Minister David Cameron calling the awards "the curry Oscars".

Now in their eighth year, the awards received 270,000 public nominations.

Glover enters stage left as Orchard boss

THE Orchard Theatre in Dartford has a new leader at its helm going into 2013.

Parent company HQ Theatres has announced that Christopher Glover has been appointed to take the Home Gardens venue forward.

Glover takes up his new role this month after several years at Churchill Theatre in Bromley, where he took up roles as marketing and commercial chief, deputy general manager and finally general manager.

HQ Theatres chief executive Derek Nicholls said: "I have every confidence Christopher is the right person to realise the full potential of The Orchard as an arts and entertainment centre."

HOMES

Figures show viewings are up but more sales needed

IN ITS latest survey of the housing market, the Royal Institute of Chartered Surveyors (RICS) said there were signs of increased buyer demand.

But the group says this must be turned into confirmed sales for the market to pick up.

"The number of potential buyers going out and viewing property saw a welcome boost last month," said Ian Perry, RICS housing spokesman.

"That being said, overall activity is still very low in most parts of the country and what the market desperately needs is for this to translate into actual sales."

A separate report has claimed the rising cost of renting a home, the insecurity of tenancies and the financial squeeze on families are all increasing the chances of people becoming homeless.

The National Housing Federation has claimed that this 'perfect storm' was pushing more families into staying in bed-and-breakfast accommodation.

Relocation, relocation, relocation for social-housing provider at new HQ

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

TONBRIDGE and Malling's largest provider of social housing is overhauling its customer services by opening a new headquarters.

Russet is moving to premises in Kings Hill next summer from its offices in Borough Green, Larkfield and Tonbridge.

The new headquarters will replace the three smaller offices with a central development where Russet's 16,000 customers can meet their housing provider to get support.

Full disabled facilities, dedicated computer access and new refreshment areas will be included on site for residents' use.

The number of off-site visits to residents' homes will also be increased.

Denise Reeves, managing director at Russet, said "We are extremely proud to be boosting our service to residents with the opening of Russet's brand new headquarters next year. It will really let us improve the level of on- and off-site support for our customers.

Russet's commitment to its residents is what inspired this exciting move. We will be consulting with them every step of the way to make sure our new home can fit their needs exactly."

Russet owns and manages more than 7,000 properties in Tonbridge and Malling.

Russet's group partner Invicta Telecare, which

ALL-NEW:

Russet will be moving into a new building at Kings Hill provides telecare services to more than 2,000 people in Tonbridge and Malling, will share the new base.

Andrew Blevins, managing director of Kings Hill developer Liberty Property Trust UK Ltd, said: "We are delighted that Russet and Invicta Telecare have decided to relocate to Kings Hill. We have worked hard to refurbish the building so it is ready for them to start fitting out.

"Despite the difficult economic climate, this is a great endorsement for Kings Hill that will bring new jobs on to the development."

Dacia makes waves with cheapest car on sale in UK market

carsforkent.co.uk

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

IF there's a pattern as to how VW-Audi markets its Seat brand, then I can't see it.

The Spanish marque used to be touted as the group's sporting arm, but now it's a sort of crowd-pleasing sporting budget mainstream luxury brand.

This identity crisis is exemplified by a range containing the under-rated Exeo executive flagship – a spin-off from Audi's previous A4 – and the budget-price Mii city car, plus the newly-launched Toledo.

In the past, the Toledo has been a sporting saloon and this fitted nicely with its namesake Spanish city's reputation for cutting edges – Toledo is famous for making swords and, latterly, razor blades.

The latest car to bear the name isn't so sharp, though, except on price and versatility; it's a lot of car for £12,495 and the saloon profile disguises a hatchback opening into a big 550-litre boot.

The cabin is huge, with a long wheelbase enabling the Toledo to carry four adults in comfort and squeeze in another, meaning that it can attack cars in the bigger Mondeo market.

Running costs are compatible with the Toledo's true market, placing in the family hatchback or Golf/Focus segment, with fuel economy, low CO<sub>2</sub> emissions, affordable insurance and company-car benefit-in-kind ratings as low as 14 per cent – it's a car for straitened times.

The 1.6 TDI 105PS (104bhp) diesel and turbocharged 1.2 TSI 105PS petrol versions feature the marque's Ecomotive Technology, including a start/stop engine system, which saves fuel by cutting power when the car is stopped and in neutral, and an energy-recovery system to recapture brake energy and help power the car's electrics. Crash testing by EuroNCAP has also added a maximum five-star safety rating to the car's credentials.

But it's the ultra-cheap headline price that will get many would-be buyers into Seat dealerships, even if entry-level 'E' spec is quite basic and most buyers will trade up to 'S' grade (from £14,120), which includes air-con, electric-heated door mirrors, rear-screen-wiper, air-con, Bluetooth with voice control, a USB port, remote audio controls, split folding rear seats, height-adjustable driver's seat and remote central locking. Many will probably then pay a little extra or negotiate to put right the omission of smart alloys from that list.

However, they may realise that the Toledo is not the only deal on the table, because this car is also a clone of the Skoda Rapid, designed by Seat's Czech sister brand – both versions are produced in a Skoda factory.

Seat fans may know, too, that the Toledo is not the only Seat deal available either, since an all-new Leon hatchback arrives in March, priced from £15,670 and promising to be a good-looking sporting model in the past best tradition of the Spanish brand.

Toledo cuts straight to budget needs after Seat identity crisis

CHANGING PLACES: In the past the Toledo was marketed as a sporting saloon, but the latest car isn't so sharp, except on price and versatility, while it has a much larger cabin

... how the Toledo highlights apparent confusion in Seat's marketing strategy, though it could be confirmation of a new course as a budget brand.

NOT SURE

... established Seat fans will like the Toledo's no-nonsense business pitch, but it could enable the brand to recruit a new army of thrifty recruits.

REALLY LIKE

... the broad-based, blunt appeal of this new aggressively-priced Seat, even if it owes most of its existence to Czech sister brand Skoda.

DEALS ON WHEELS:
Dacia lands in the UK with its Duster SUV, far left, and the cheapest car to go on sale in Britain – the Sandero supermini

Dacia launches with budget appeal

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

ROMANIAN brand Dacia returns to the UK with a bang soon by offering what it claims will be the cheapest new car on our market.

Dacia may be remembered by some for selling a flimsy 4x4 called the Duster during the late 80s and early 90s. Since then the company has been bought and modernised by Renault to offer a budget option from the Renault group, which also includes Nissan.

Demand for cars from this revitalised Dacia has been so strong in mainland Europe that it seemed like building stock to suit British right-hand-drive needs was well down the priority list.

But order books are now open for two debut models: a new SUV wearing the old Duster model name and priced from just £8,995 and the Sandero supermini at just £5,995.

But it's the Dacia Dimensions Personal Contract Purchase (PCP) deal on the Sandero that catches the eye: £69 a month for three years, after a deposit of £1,845. Dacia says that makes the Sandero Britain's most affordable new car.

PCP deals on the Duster are not much dearer

– a £3,179 deposit secures a package of £99 per month.

For those worried about spending out on a relatively unknown brand, Dacia is also offering modest and fully refundable £100 deposits for those who order now – deliveries for both cars start early next year.

And while the Dacia warranty is the industry's normal three years/60,000 miles rather than the five- and even seven-year tickets from some, Dacia is offering five-year/60,000 miles and seven-year/100,000 miles peace-of-mind upgrades, costing £395 and £850 respectively.

There's even a deal allowing the five-year warranty to be wrapped into a five-year hire-purchase plan.

With the UK economy still a worry, launching a whole new motor brand is a risk, but maybe not when the prices are this keen and hard-pressed consumers want to nail down exactly what their monthly motoring costs will be.

You can book a test drive for the following dates and Motorline Dacia locations: Maidstone (Monday, December 10), Ashford (Tuesday, December 11) and Canterbury (Wednesday, December 12).

BMW ensures original lifestyle estate is still ahead of its rivals

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

MORE than any other car, the BMW 3 Series created the 'lifestyle estate' concept.

The second-generation model of the 1980s – the 'Yuppy' favourite – was the first '3' to get the load-lugger back end and Touring label and it went down a storm.

Instead of estates being seen simply as tools for tradesmen, reps and farmers, they became desirable to those who liked to suggest that they went huntin', shootin' and fishin' at weekends or owned a country cottage.

Other brands jumped on the bandwagon and most estate cars now wear a fancy label and cater more for lifestyle buyers than those who genuinely need a wagon for large loads.

Not that the latest BMW Touring is a lightweight here; the newly-launched sixth-generation car (from £26,125) claims to have the most load space in its class yet it's the sleekest-looking estate car around – and that certainly wasn't always the case.

Even the original E30 was not the most elegant. Style also strayed on generations four and five, but the new car and its saloon sister mark a return to conservative elegance and class.

It looks wider, lower and meaner even though it is actually slightly narrower than before, a trick played by the wider treatment of BMW's trademark grille, which used to be likened to twin kidneys but has evolved far from that now.

The wheelbase is even longer, too, adding to the wheel-at-each-corner big-car look and improving rear accommodation – something for which the previous car was criticised.

But the latest 3 Series is also a highly tax-friendly eco-warrior, being lighter and using the latest in BMW's EfficientDynamics fuel and emissions-saving technology.

But if this all adds to BMW's long-standing publicity line – The Ultimate Driving Machine – we need to recall that this was originally coined

BMW 3 SERIES 320d MODERN TOURING: PRICE £30,380

IN A CLASS OF ITS OWN:

BMW's latest Touring model has had some restyling so it now looks wider, lower and meaner but is also lighter and one of the most eco-friendly cars in its sector to highlight the car's appeal to keen drivers.

And the new car – green and efficient though it undoubtedly is – doesn't disappoint, even in the line-up's biggest-selling and probably most sensible model, the two-litre diesel 320d.

This is the mainstay version behind the 3 Series' presence in the top 10 of UK best-sellers; company-car-man loves it and his fleet manager or leasing company idolises it, too, because there is an army of would-be second-hand buyers to keep residuals sky-high despite the ubiquity of the 3 Series.

And the 320d Touring we road-tested proves that it is a consummate all-rounder: practical, good-looking, frugal – it can average about 60mpg – and a cracking drive.

The key is the new standard-fit Driving Experience Control switch offering Comfort, Sport, Sport + and Eco Pro options for the powertrain and chassis.

An eight-speed automatic gearbox is available

MOTORING NEWS

Soft-top Beetle coming soon

ORDER books are open for the new Volkswagen Beetle Cabriolet (from £18,150) – deliveries start next April.

The story began in 1949 with the original Beetle Convertible, continued with the New Beetle Cabriolet of 2002, and is now beautifully re-executed by the newcomer, which also delivers more boot space, folding rear seats and a hood that rises/lowers in just 9.5 seconds.

CX-5 outguns the favourites

MAZDA'S impressive new light and agile CX-5 SUV has won Japan's coveted Car Of The Year prize, holding off the much-fancied Toyota GT86/Subaru BRZ sports car.

But the contest was also significant for the number of European models showing well: the BMW 3 Series (third), the Range Rover Evoque (fourth), VW Up (fifth), Citroën DS5 (seventh) and Alfa Romeo Giulietta (eighth).

Unveiling of Kia's halo car

THIS is the first glimpse of Kia's much-anticipated Proceed GT hot-hatch – the halo sportster the Korean brand needs to enhance its profile on top of some excellent new models including the Ceed family hatch and Sportage SUV.

The driver-oriented Proceed will launch in the second half of 2013 and features a 1.6-litre turbocharged petrol engine and six-speed manual box.
